Description

Zhovkva. The Basilian Monastery and the Church of the Sacred Heart of Christ

The complex of the Basilian monastery consists of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Christ (1612-1905, formerly the Church of the Nativity and the Holy Trinity), monastic cells (1782), a bell tower (1770), and a printing house. The church acquired its modern appearance after the 1903 reconstruction designed by Edgar Kovacs.

The monastery of St. Basil the Great was a religious and cultural center in Galicia. In 1895, a printing house and a publishing house of theological and popular literature were founded here. In 1901, the church was rebuilt, and in 1935 new wall paintings were added by Julian Butsmانيuk, a famous Ukrainian monumentalist and creator of a new artistic concept, the Ukrainian Secession, who combined religious themes and events from real Ukrainian history.

Since 1990, the church has been a functioning church of the Ukrainian Greek Catholic Church.

In 2002, during the renovation of the monastery and church, the Basilians of Zhovkva found more than two hundred skeletons, including 45 children's skeletons. An examination proved that these people were tortured by the Soviet authorities in the postwar period. After all, in the second half of the 1940s, the former monastery housed the headquarters of the NKVD for some time, whose employees exterminated the population at a "Stakhanovian" pace. Now these victims of Soviet terror are reburied in the city cemetery.
